Okay, so the end of the second week and I've been going back through Learn to Code 2. And getting that done want to get that off my plate, like I said, I was going in too many directions and wanted to just knock some things out, finish some stuff and then go do a little more bouncing around. So I tried this several different ways and looked at different algorithms to come up with one. I think this one was a pretty good way to do it that is clean and works similar every time
