I was playing with Sonic Sorkshop today. It was really cool. It's set up a lot different and like the way they had where the this the learning materials were off to the right. And then as you went through it and went out, got out of the way then came back. And it even gave you the chance to copy the code or to just drag it over. And it was kind of neat because we're playing with some neat topics like closures, which was a lot of fun to see some different things and also presented in a different way. This is a shot of the tutorial part with on the right instead of being in the middle of the code.
