Okay, so this was an interesting day today. I started out and spent about an hour working on trying to get an individual identification of each sheep object. And that wasn't working real well. I then decided to see about putting on some labels onto the screen to count the number of sheep. But that didn't go well either. I then spent some time working on getting wolves to show up on the field. And that didn't go well but I finally got a breakthrough and was able to get them randomly placed around the field. It was a tough day, but all in all, I got some good information out of it and practice some good skills.
