I have been spending a lot of time talking with my rubber duck.
If you're coding and don't have one, go get one. Okay, so I was trying to reverse engineer Blink and I kept running into walls. We were talking about that yesterday. And today I ran into more just decided, Okay, enough with this because I just need to go create it myself. So started working on that when in and downloaded the starter book template and working on that learned quite a bit. had to do some playing.

Right now we're in between some unique edges and had to go back and finally download Xcode 11.1 to get that to work and to make it work, make the book work and make things start to work. And I'm making progress. Hey, that's what it's all about. And those are some things I learned. So if you're going to create your own right now do it with Xcode 11.1 the others just so far not working, right. So, that's where we're at and that that's about an hour to work. So I'll see you tomorrow.
