Well, I found a problem with my logic, and the sheep counter was not working well, it would actually count incorrectly and give me a negative number if it ain't all the sheep. It's a situation where it was counting, and then taking things off and not really doing things in the right order. So I had to go in and play with that to get it fixed. You can see from my note that I had some weird logic, I would get a negative three on the number of sheet. I found the problem and got my counter are working very effectively now. And so things are moving really well. You got to pay attention to the logic. fixing that problem allowed me to get another counter on the screen to see how many sheep were actually being eaten at a time. That's why testing is so so, so important.
