So I'm going to test out some new features, but I don't want to mess up all of the stuff that I've done before. So I'm going to create a new branch. And I'm going to start putting in a user controller where we can affect things like speed, and the number of sheep and birth rates and all those things and see it in real time, hopefully. So I'm going to create a new branch, which essentially means I'm going to be able to test out new features without affecting all of the things that I made before. So this new feature is going to put in a control panel at the top and I've been able to get the playing field constrained down with space at the top
